AMERICAN SOCIETY OF EQUITY TAKES ACTION.

Meet at Owensboro and Have a Campaign-- Citizens Indorse the Farmers' Plans-- Other Notes About the Growers.

A delegation from the Green River Tobacco Growers Association of the American Society of Equity, nearly 500 strong, representing five counties of the Green river district, met in Owensboro Tuesday morning of last week and spent the day and night organizing and mapping out a campaign. The sole object of their meeting was to formulate plans to prevent the 1907 crop of tobacco being placed on the market while tobacco of the 1905 and 1906 crops pooled by members of the A. S. of E. is unsold, and the aim was not to disturb until a thorough canvass had been made of the five counties to ask every farmer to pledge his crop, and to request all the largest tobacco factories in Owensboro to immediately recall their buyers who were going over the district making contracts for thousands of pounds of this year's crop of tobacco.

On Wednesday morning the farmers' army was divided into four detachments, each under the command of a captain and with a definite line of march mapped out, started from the court-house, unarmed and in a peaceful state, to carry out their plans.

Headed by their newly elected general, L. E. Robertson, State organizer of the A. S. of E., they visited the following factories: The Imperial, Galt, Laher, American, J. M. Vaughn and Frank Birk.

The growers were successful and by Thursday the largest companies announced that they had recalled all of their buyers and would not return until again until the present agitation had quieted down.

The work of visiting the homes of the farmers who had not pooled their tobacco, was kept up until Saturday, and most all the territory in Daviess county was covered by the different armies of the A. S. of E., most of them having great success in getting all those who had not pooled their tobacco to sign pledges to do so.

Monday a number of recruits were enlisted, and the army left Owensboro and started for McLean county. Nothing has been made public as to whether or not a second campaign will be made in Daviess.

Owensboro Helps.

A petition was circulated among the business and other men of Owensboro, asking for concessions to the A. S. of E., and was numerously signed. The petition stated that the citizens of Owensboro and Daviess county endorsed the action of the members of the A. S. of E. in their peaceful efforts to escape the danger that threatened them.

A. S. of E. Call Meeting.

A meeting has been called by the Breckenridge county chairman, Matthew Shewberry, of the A. S. of E., to be held at Cardinalsburg, Saturday, November 2. Mr. Shewberry states there is some important business to be attended to, and he urges every member to be present.

Equity Notes.

The fifth annual convention of the National American Society of Equity which was in session at Indianapolis last week, has finished its labors and adjourned.

Mr. Henry S. Berry, a delegate to the convention, had a lengthy article in Sunday's Owensboro Messenger. A matter of much interest in his article was how Mr. J. A. Everett, in which he writes as follows: "Mr. Everett, who, beyond a question of a doubt, was the originator of the great idea upon which the society was founded, saw himself confronted by accusations and was compelled to decline to stand for re-election to the presidency. Those who brought the charges against him claimed to have the evidence that would substantiate every charge while he claimed that he was accused and denied the charge to confront the charges and clear his name."

C. M. Barnett, of Ohio county, was elected president. Mr. Stutte, of Hills, was elected vice-president, and Mr. Pauley, of North Dakota, was chosen secretary. Mr. Berry's article also contained the following: "What seemed to be such a storm that would shake the society turned out to be only a squall, and I dare say that never was a quarrel settled that left so little sting and unpleasantness. As pre-arranged in the Kentucky caucus, Mr. Everett was called to the stage at this time and made a speech offering the new president his hand and promising to give his aid and support to the new officers in carrying out the aims of the society to which he so dear to him. His speech touched the hearts of the convention and made every one assembled with the unpleasant task of turning him down could have been obviated."

The national headquarters of the A. S. of E. will probably be transferred from Indianapolis to Louisville. The tobacco growers of Fayette and Woodford counties at their conventions last week decided not to raise any tobacco in 1908.

The National Tobacco Growers are holding a meeting at Shelbyville today.

John P. Haswell, Jr., Candidate For The Legislature Stands on the Following Resolutions Adopted by the Convention Which Nominated Him.

We condemn the present revenue law, especially that feature which provides for the issuing of tax warrants, thereby imposing heavy penalties on the poor tax-payers in which local officials are the sole beneficiaries and from which the Commonwealth receives no benefits, and if the Republican party is put in power, we pledge ourselves to its repeal.

RESOLVED, We condemn the proposed amendment to the Constitution to be voted upon at the ensuing election because the intention of same is, and the result would be, if adopted, a further means to make bribery and intimidation more easy.

AS TO THE LAW ON ISSUING TAX WARRANTS.

EDITOR NEWS:

The Attorney General is the chief law officer of the Commonwealth, and as such, it is his duty, upon the application of any executive or ministerial officer of the State, to give all such officers his opinion in writing touching any of the duties of his office. (See section 112 of the Kentucky Statutes.)

Auditor Hager, now the Democratic candidate for Governor, requested the Attorney General, under this statute, to construe section 24, article 8, of the new revenue act. This is that part of the law providing for tax warrants. In response to this request, the Attorney General filed a written opinion in regard to the law concerning tax warrants on December 13, 1906. Here is what he says in regard to the fees the County Clerk and Sheriff may charge:

"So we conclude the Clerk is entitled to a fee of 60 cents for issuing a tax warrant."

"If the Clerk indexes the warrants he is entitled to 10 cents for each name."

"The first clause fixes the fee (of the Sheriff) at 6 per cent. on the first $300 of the warrant and 3 per cent. on the residue."

Under this opinion of the Attorney General the legal fees are not exceeding 70 cents to the Clerk and 14 cents to the Sheriff. In this county the Clerk has been charging $1.50 as his fee and the Sheriff 50 cents as his cost. In other words, they have charged more than twice as much as the Attorney General says is legal. There were more than 2,000 tax warrants issued in Breckenridge county last year by the County Clerk. Figure it out yourselves and see what this iniquitous tax warrant law cost the tax-payers of this county.

SAD DEATH.

Lovely Young Girl A Victim of Typhoid--Was in Her Seventeenth Year.

Chenault, Ky., Oct. 29. (Special.)—When just in the verge of womanhood and with every promise of a beautiful life, Mary Greenwell, died of typhoid fever, Sunday morning, October 19, after a short illness. The interment took place in the St. Theresa's cemetery the following day, the services being conducted by the Rev. Father Raux.

Miss Greenwell was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Greenwell, of this place, and was seventeen years of age. Besides her parents, she is survived by two sisters and six brothers. Her bright, cheerful disposition won for her a host of friends, who deeply sympathize with her grieving parents.

Thomas A. Edison, the great American inventor, says: "Fifty eighty per cent. of the illness of mankind comes from eating improper food or too much food; people are inclined to over-indulge themselves." This is where indigestion finds its beginning in nearly every case. The stomach can do just so much work and no more, and when you overload it, or when you eat the wrong kind of food the digestive organs cannot possibly do the work demanded of them. It is at such times that the stomach needs help; it demands help, and warns you by headaches, belching, sour stomach, nausea and indigestion. You should attend to this at once by taking something that will actually do the work for the stomach. Kodol will do this. It is a combination of natural digestants and vegetable acids and contains the same juices found in a healthy stomach. It is pleasant to take. It digests what you eat. Sold by All Druggists.

SALEM ASSOCIATION.

Baptists Have Two Days Meeting at Raymond--Fifteen Churches Represented.

The Salem Baptist Association had a two days session Wednesday and Thursday at Raymond. Both days there were many in attendance, and plenty of fried chicken was served to the visitors by the people of Raymond.

Ex-Judge W. L. Hagar was moderator, and Rev. B. G. Saunders was clerk. They were both re-elected to their respective offices of the Association.

The annual reports were read, missions and other matters of interest were discussed by the members and delegates. On account of their beloved pastor, the Rev. Everett English, being ill with eye trouble, the Rev. D. F. Shacklette, of Ekron, acted as minister pro tem.

The Rev. L. S. Sanders, field agent for the Louisville Baptist Orphan Home, was there and made an address in the interest of the home's work. The meeting was very beneficial and so enjoyable that the association would be pleased to meet at Raymond next year.

Has Fifty-One

Pigs in Three Litters.

Editor Farmers Home Journal:

I have an old I. C. sow that is a record breaker, and I thought a bit of her history would be of interest to your readers. She has had three successive litters of seventeen each, and one of sixteen. I now have fourteen fine pigs of last litter, which are two weeks old. She has had pigs sired by Duroc and Poland-China boars, and has never had anything but a snow white pig. I would like for you to publish this, and see if anybody can beat her record.

The machine is on the run.

"Help me Billy, or I sink."—Beckham.

President Roosevelt was 49 last Sunday, October 27.

Smash the machine by voting the straight Republican ticket next Tuesday.

There is no politics in this race. The question is, shall we have decency, honesty, sobriety and be free from boss and machine rule.

Mr. Willson has personally promised Mr. Haswell that he will sign a law to repeal the law providing for penalties and tax warrants.

Every man, woman and child in this county knows just where John Haswell stands and how he will vote in the next Legislature. They don't know where Dr. Foote stands.

There is a "bat wing" manufactory now in full operation in this county. Shun the "bat wing" and the men who handle them. It is a strike at your liberties as a freeman.

Machine politics and boss politicians are the curse of our State and government. Are you in favor of continuing and endorsing their methods? If so, vote for Hager and Foote, if not, vote for Willson and Haswell.

We believe Mr. Willson when he says: "I am happily free from machine and trust alike, and I am just finishing an earnest campaign which is to free the people of Kentucky from the machine which the tobacco trust has given large sums of money in order to keep in power."

"The nation is looking with interest upon the political battle that is now being waged in Kentucky. The verdict will give encouragement to people everywhere who believe in honest elections and fair dealings between man and man if that verdict is rendered for Augustus E. Willson."—Vice President Charles Warren Fairbanks.

TAKE YOUR CHOICE.

"I am a Republican, but if the Republican party is against temperance I should be against the Republican party. I never saw the day I would let the Republican party govern my judgment on moral questions."—A. E. Willson.

And the man who said this: "I am a Democrat. If a majority of the Democrats are for whiskey I AM FOR WHISKY. If a majority of the Democrats are for temperance, I am for temperance." S. W. Hager.

BECKHAM AND THE FARMERS.

It is heralded over this country that Gov. Beckham is the best friend we ever had. We admit he did not oppose the capitol appropriation, but if any of the one things said about his administration in regard to contributions received, (rather tribute exacted) from public contractors, be true, then it may be that he favored the appropriation in order to have another large contractor, who could, if he felt disposed, contribute to his campaign. But let us look at the Governor's record as a friend of the farmer. It was shown by an investigating committee of the Senate that the great Tobacco Trust, called the American Tobacco Co., contributed fifteen thousand ($15,000) dollars to Gov. Beckham's campaign expenses. We do not know whether they thought they had a promise like the liquor men thought they did, but it is plain that the only law that was ever on the statute books that favored the tobacco grower, the McCain law, was repealed by one of the Governor's legislative straits. Strange that in all his speeches the Governor has never once referred to his position on that law, or on the tobacco trust—a subject that is alive just now. The farmers and tobacco growers should remember this contribution and the repeal of the law that followed, when they are reminded of the many things the Governor has done."—Editorial in Frankfort Call of November 2, 1906.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and the tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Sent for circulars free.

Lightfoot-Leitch.

The marriage of Miss Sallie Johnnie Lightfoot, of Hawesville, to Mr. John C. Leitch, of Pittsburgh, Pa., was a social event of last night in which Cloverport felt much interest, the bride having been a frequent and always popular visitor here. The ceremony was performed at 9 o'clock in the pretty little Presbyterian church, adorned for the occasion with autumn foliage and many potted plants. Rev. Dr. Smith, of Louisville, being the officiating clergyman. The bride party entered to the "Classic chorus from 'Lohengrin'" rendered by a choir under the direction of Mrs. Alfred Reenen. The ushers, Messrs. Ewing Lightfoot, of Henderson, and Thomas James de Hunt, of Cannelton, headed the procession, followed by the maid of honor, Miss Julia Beauchamp Hinkle, walking alone; lastly coming the bride on the arm of her father, Dr. John Foster Lightfoot. Mr. Leitch, with his best man, Dr. Charles Ross Lightfoot, of Paducah, entered from the lecture room, and the impressive Episcopal ring ceremony was used. White satin chiffon, made empire style with long court train, with elaborate insets of heavy antique lace was the brides toilette, completed by a long tulle veil and a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Hinkle was becomingly attired in white pompadour net, made princess style over light blue tulle, and carried American Beauties. Relatives a d intimate friends were entertained at the bride's home after the service, this house being artistically decorated and the bridal table, at which twelve were seated, especially handsome. A profusion of rare gifts evinced the popularity of both parties and were chosen with marked taste.

Mr. and Mrs. Leitch took the 11:26 train for St. Louis where they are spending to-day. Friday night a large reception will be given in their honor by the groom's sister, Miss Leitch, in Allegheny, where the family connection is extensive and prominent in society.

FORTY YEARS BETWEEN.

devote his life to the woman he loved. He called her the dearest and begged her not to forget him. He said, "I will be with you, dearer than his own, a perception of his desperate protestations with him. The daughter of one king, a sister of another, could she not get force by force? These were the orders with their rough voices and drawn pistols, who were they to threaten a princess of the royal blood and carry away her lover before her eyes?

If they were strong, she was asked, however murderous or far ranging, could penetrate those mountain recesses which she would carry away before the morning? Ah, he said, it was for him to choose between them; between Britain and his island; between love or the service of the white queen, toward the sea. "I have chosen," he said.

Her eyes flashed as she freed herself from his arms. "You have hated in my own sight for having loved you," she said. "Will you not even wish me well, Tebes?" he asked.

"I have," she cried, "I hope you will die."

He turned away. "I am," she cried after him.

"He came back to her, downcast and silent.

"Remember," she said in a agony of sweet relenting, "that wherever you go, wherever my years that may divide us, however wide the waters or the land, I shall be here waiting for thee, here in this house of our happiness, and if I die before thou comest, here thou wilt find my grave."

"Tebes," he said, "as God sees me, some day I shall return." She took his hand and looked up into his face with such poignant longing and tenderness that Jack's comrades, already unaccountable enough, were quite overcome by the scene. Though old Tebes snuffed audibly, and Brady could hardly speak.

"Come, come, lead," he cried huskily, "you mustn't keep us longer."

Jack unlaced the girl's hands and suffered himself to be led away by his room. As stumbling and falling against one another in the dark, he made shift to find the uncertain path. Winterless in the lead cooing like a dove for them to follow. Little by little they gained the steeping village and pressed on to the beach beyond, where their boat was already waiting on the incoming tide.

They took their places without a word and pushed off in the direction of the ship. In the pass, rising and falling in the swell, they turned a blind eye to the darkness. They were with another and ran up a steamed lantern to guide them. A few minutes later they clambered up the ladder, the boat was hoisted in, and the boatman's whistle was ringing the watch on deck.

"Marsalau ha!" By morning the island had sunk behind them, and standing on the dizzy main royal yard, with one arm round the mast, Jack could make out nothing but a little cloud on the horizon.

At sixty John Garrard was a post captain, a knight commander of the Bath and within a year of receiving the rank of admiral, a first class. His career had been more than distinguished, and he had won his way to the front as much by his fine personal qualities as by his brilliant military judgment and high professional attainments. He had earned the character of a man who could be trusted in situations involving tact, temper and diplomatic skill.

He had never married and when raised on the subject was wont to say, with a laugh, that the sea was his only mistress. No one had ever ventured to question him much further, though his friends were often puzzled, especially the women, as to the implied romance in the captain's earlier life. It was known he supported two old maid sisters, the Misses Hadow, the impoverished daughters of his first commander, but in view of his considerable private fortune this drain on his resources seemed scarcely the reason of his remaining single. He did it to his admirers that any woman could have had the heart to refuse him, for even at sixty he was a noticeably handsome man and his eyes, as he said, with more than the advantage of good looks—a charm of manner, a distinction, a captivating gallantry that made every where a favorite.

"But you see, Jack isn't a marrying man," his friends explained.

There was in command of the inflexible battleship, one of the Atlantic fleet, when she developed some defects in her hydraulic turning gear and was ordered home to England by Admiral Lord George Howard for overhaul. The captain's heart beat a little faster as he realized his course would take him south of the Societies. He spread out the chart and studied the aid his finger on Borabora. He shut his eyes and saw the basaltic cliffs, the white and foaming reefs, the green, still forests of that forgotten island. He was a boy once more, with flowers in his hair, wandering beneath the palms of the years. How often had he thought of her during the long years that had left him gray and old, the years that had carried him unthought through so many dangers in every quarter of the world. For him she was still in her adorable girlhood, untouched by time, a radiant princess in her radiant life, waiting by the shores of his return.

He remembered that she was not far short of sixty—a fat old woman perhaps married to some strapping chief and more than likely with grown children of her own. How incredible it seemed. But a word, and he might land and see her. But a word, and the question of forty years might yet be answered. Answered, yes, to slatter as like as not, with pitiful realities, the tender fragment of a dream. No, he said, he dared not expose himself to a possible disillusion, to play into the hands of sinister fate, over machines and men. No, but he would carry his ship close in shore and watch from the bridge the unfolding days and tiny settlements of that lost paradise island, dipping his flag to his vanished youth, he would sink over the horizon, his memory thrilled and his sentiment unpaired, to set his foot on virgin soil. Tebes was hovering as he slowed down to leeward of the island and watched the shadows melt away, him, was a day of heavenly calm.

fresh air winded, with a sea so smooth that the harder reef for once were silent, and one could hear the waves under the hushed and shining water, the coo of pigeons in the forest. Unhappily, the breeze, which had been blowing from the northeast, shifted to the south, the ship hauled the shore and steamed at a snail's pace round the island. On the other side of the bay, high above the water, the face of his command, the white haired captain, impassive, supreme and solitary, gave no sign of his emotions, but the young man, young him. Along the shore the sight of the battleship brought out here and there a startled figure or a group of laughing girls on horseback on ponies, raced the indefatigable for a mile, and then their road ending in a precipice, three knees with their solemn eyes to seaward and forgot for a moment the road to church.

A white man, in striped pajamas, was surprised at morning coffee on the veranda of his little house. He darted inside and reappeared with a magazine rifle, which he emptied in the air and followed up his courtesies by raising and lowering a union jack to the size of a handkerchief. The battleship dipped her stately white ensign in acknowledgment, as a swan might salute a guest, and swept on with majesty.

With every mile the boys and wooed promontories grew increasingly familiar as Sir John was borne toward Lihua, the scene of his boyish folly. He looked ashore in wonder, surprised at the vividness and exactness of his recollection. He might have landed anywhere and found his way through those tangled, scented paths, with no other guide but memory.

There was Papolawa, with its soaring falls; there, the t' a Pea, where he had shot his first goat; yonder the forest of little Tia, where he had been and he had camped a night in the clouds in an air of English cold. It was like a homecoming to see all these familiar scenes spreading out before him. He looked at his hands, his thin, veined, wrinkled hands, and it came over him, with a sort of surprise, that he was an old man.

"That was forty years ago," he said to himself. "Forty years ago?"

As Lihua opened out and he perceived, with an inexpressible pain, the thatched houses and bread trees in the shade of palms and breadfruit trees, he felt himself in the throes of a strange and painful indecision. He was torn, with the tug of war, between up and down the bridge; he lit a cigar and threw it away again; he twice approached Commander Stillwell as though to give an order, and then, still in doubt, turned shamefacedly on his heel.

"If the deep mine" came the hoarse murmur of the lieutenant. "It lay with him to stop the ship or not—a word and she would come shivering to a standstill; a word and the mainmast would play away his crew and the crew would be running to their places. His heart ached with the desire to land; but something—he did not want—something he did not want—something he did not want—the opportunity would pass away forever. It was passing now with every turn of the propeller. Had he not told her he would return? Had he not whispered that night when they were torn apart? Did he not owe it to her to keep the promise of forty years, a promise given in the flush of youth and hope, and sealed with scalding tears?

His resolution was taken. He ordered Commander Stillwell to stop the ship and lower a boat. "I am going to treat myself to a run ashore," he said by way of explanation.

The vessel slowly stopped. The covers were whipped off the rig. She was hoisted out and lowered, the crew dropping down the ladder into their places at the peep-peep-peep of the whistle.

"I leave the ship," said Sir John, not to convey a fact patently obvious, but in obedience to a naval formula. He was landed at a little cove where in bygone days he had often walked away an hour in charge of Hadow's boat. It gave him a singular sensation to feel the keel grate against the shingle and to say to himself that this was Lihua! He drew a deep breath as he looked about and noticed how unchanged it all was. There were some new houses in new places and grass on the sites of others that were endeared to him in recollection, but he was Lihua after all, the Lihua of his boyhood, the Lihua of his dreams. For awhile he strolled about at random, walking with the phantoms of the past, hearing their laughter, seeing their faces, recalling a thousand things he had forgotten.

It came over him with a start that the village was empty. Then he remembered it was Sunday, and they were all in church. Thank God there were none to watch him, no prying, curious eyes to disturb his thoughts. But they would soon be out again, and he believed him to make the best use of his solitude while he might.

He struck inland, his heart beating with a curious expectancy. At every sound he held his breath, and he would turn quickly and look back with a haunting sense that Tebes was near him; that perhaps she was gazing at him through the trees. He approached his old home through overgrown plantations. It ached to him to part the branches and to feel himself drawing nearer at every step to the only home he had ever called his own. He heard the splashing waterfall he stopped, not daring for the moment to go on. When at last he did so, and found no one, he found no one.

house at all. Nothing but ferns and weeds, man high. He moved about here and there, up to the armpits in verdure, in consternation at discovering it gone.

His foot struck against a bowlder. He had forgotten there were any rocks on the hill. He moved along and his foot struck again. He pressed the weeds back and looked down.

He had never occurred to him before that Tebes might be dead.

He held back the undergrowth again and peered into the depths. Yes, it was the grave of a chief or a woman of rank, one of those artless monuments of cement and rock that the natives, with poetic fancy, used to call "faleilais," houses of sandalwood, "ololais," or the place where birds sing; or, in vulgar speech, simply "tunnagana," or tombs. These words, unspoken, unthought of for forty years—lost, and again forgotten in some recess of his brain—now returned to him with tormenting recollection. He laid both hands on the ground, and he dug with his fingers from the ground. He seized another and dragged it out with the same ferocity.

It was intolerable that he should suffer under all this warm, wet jungle that intruded itself, like a horrible nuisance, where there was none; that he should be so close to the air and sunshine, that he had loved so often; that he should uncover the poorest place that marked her last resting place; he would try to force the earth that wrapped her dead beauty.

He worked with desperation until his hands were bleeding, until his eyes were stung and blinded with the streaming sweat. Dizzy with the heat, parched with thirst and sick with the steam that rose from the damp ground, he was forced again and again to retreat and rest. He cut his waistcoat into strips and bound them round his bloody hands; he broke the blades of his penknife on recalcitrant roots that defied the strength of his arms; he

Town Drummers.
In Scotland the town drummer was an important personage and performed many duties. When beggars or suspicious characters could not give a satisfactory account of themselves on being brought before the bailies and were ordered to be placed in the pillory or in the jails they were afterwards drummed out of the town. The drummer would also make known after beating his drum to attract attention notices relating to town affairs, and would also make known the various orders of public authority, etc.—London Notes and Queries.

Moonshine.
The glory of the sun and the glory of the moon are widely varied in degree. "Try," said an astronomer, "to imagine the sky studded all over with full moons. You might think such a glare would be intolerable, that we should be deluged with an overwhelming light. Yet it is perfectly true that we could very well live under a sky whose every part was just as bright as the moon itself. This is easily proved, for when we compare the brightness of the full moon with the brightness of the sun we find that the sun is as bright as 600,000 full moons."

If you take Dewitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills you will get prompt relief from backache, weak kidneys, inflammation of the bladder and urinary troubles. A week's treatment 25 cents. Sold by All Druggists.

Shaved Back The Tide.
"Bletherin Bobble," a Dumfries carrier, went down to Charleston one day for a load of sand, but to his dismay found it was high water and none could be got. After pouring out the visk of his wrath on his carrier master for allowing the tide to rise he went home with his empty cart. Com lag back next day when it happened to be low water, he exclaimed:

"Aye, 'tis something like the thing. The best o' folk's nae the waur o' bein' spoken to."—Dundee People's Journal.

A Wild Metaphor.
The mixed metaphor has for years been considered what is technically known as a punch, but long ago an embryo Henry Clay, a contestant for oratorical honors in the University of Michigan, sprung one so much more rapid in the metaphor here than its rival that it may be said to win in a walk. Hiding up on his tiptoes and swelling out his chest like a pouter pigeon, the young orator exclaimed as though he would his words might go thundering down the ages. "The star of empire, tripping with light footsteps across the Atlantic, poises on its tip-toes under the wings of the wind and then pitches—and in its hope it may be forever—her tent above the dome of the capitol at Washington."
